01 — EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The headline

Unimax Steel has built a solid, professional foundation online. The opportunities ahead are about polish, persuasion, and trust-building — small refinements that, taken together, can make the site feel like the obvious choice for contractors, developers, and project owners.

What we love: Clear menu structure, three-location coverage, prominent contact details, and a downloadable brochure that gives serious buyers something tangible to share.

Where we'll focus: Sharper messaging, stronger trust signals, more confident product storytelling, and a few technical refinements that make the site faster and easier to find on Google.

How we've organised it: Recommendations are grouped into Quick Wins (this month), Strategic Upgrades (1–3 months), and Growth Investments (3–6 months) — so progress is visible early and momentum compounds over time.

02 — YOUR AUDIT TEAM

Five lenses, one report

We assembled five specialists to look at your site through different lenses, so every recommendation comes from someone who lives in that craft daily.

UX / UI Designer

How easy and intuitive the site is to use.

Copywriter

The words, tone, and clarity of the message.

Graphic Designer

Visual identity, photography, and brand feel.

Web Developer

The technical foundation under the hood.

Digital Marketing Expert

How the site attracts visitors, builds trust, and converts inquiries.

03 — WHAT'S WORKING WELL

Strengths to build on

Before recommendations, here's what the team agreed is genuinely strong about the current site.

- ✓ A clean, logical menu — Home, About, Products, Projects, Contact — exactly what a buyer expects.
- ✓ Phone, email, and address are visible across every page, which builds confidence quickly.
- ✓ A downloadable brochure gives serious buyers something tangible to share with their team.
- ✓ Three-location coverage (Quezon City HQ, Pampanga, Pangasinan) signals real operational scale.
- ✓ A clear product family — Roofing, Decking, C-Purlins, Spandrel, Insulated Panels, Metal Furring — well-organised into recognisable categories.

04 — SPECIALIST FINDINGS

Recommendations from each lens

Each note below is framed as an opportunity — what's possible if we build on the foundation that's already there.

01 UX / UI Designer

"Make it easier to say yes."

Right now, a visitor lands on the homepage and has to scroll and read to understand what to do next. We can make the path from curiosity to inquiry feel almost effortless.

- Sharpen the hero section. The first screen should answer three questions in five seconds: Who are you? What do you sell? What should I do next? A single strong headline plus one clear button (e.g., "Request a Quote") works harder than multiple competing links.
- Add breathing room. The current layout is information-rich but feels tight. A bit more space between sections lets each message land.
- Strengthen the call-to-action buttons. Buttons like "See Roofing Options" or "Get a Project Quote" tell people exactly what they'll get when they click.
- Add a sticky "Get a Quote" button on mobile. Many buyers are on-site or on the road — a tap-to-inquire button that follows them down the page can lift inquiries significantly.
- Make product cards more inviting with a short benefit line under each name (e.g., "Long-span, pre-painted, fade-resistant") so visitors don't have to click into every page to compare.

02 Copywriter

"Sound like the leader you are."

The current copy is professional but generic. With a few sharper lines, it can sound unmistakably like Unimax.

- Tighten the value proposition. "Passion for Strength & Quality" is a nice tagline — pair it with something specific buyers care about: "Pre-painted Philippine steel — delivered fast, priced fairly, built to last."
- Clean up small typos. A few quick fixes will make the site feel more polished — for example, "Conatct Us," "discorver more," "Seirra," and "Send your inquries" — plus a small repetition in the vision statement.
- Lead with benefits, not just features. Add one sentence per product on who it's for and why it's chosen — e.g., "Maxi Hi Rib — engineered for wide-span warehouses where speed of installation matters."
- Tell the Unimax story with more confidence. The 2017 origin and 2020 Pangasinan expansion are great milestones — turn them into a short, proud "Our Journey" section that signals momentum.
- Add an FAQ section. Questions like "What's the lead time?", "Do you deliver to my province?", "What gauges are available?" answer real buyer hesitations and double as SEO gold.

03 Graphic Designer

"Look as premium as the product."

Your products are physical, tactile, and impressive in scale. The site can do more to convey that.

- Invest in one strong photo shoot. A handful of high-resolution, on-site photos — sheets being installed, a finished warehouse roof at golden hour, close-ups of profile detail — will lift the entire site. This single investment pays back across the site, brochure, and social channels.
- Establish a clear colour system. A defined palette (one signature colour, one accent, plus neutrals) used consistently across buttons, headers, and icons makes the brand feel intentional.
- Standardise typography. Pick one font for headlines and one for body text and use them consistently across all pages.
- Refresh the brochure to match. The downloadable PDF is a key sales tool — it deserves the same level of design polish as the website.
- Add a simple "made in the Philippines" or quality mark. A small visual badge for local manufacturing is meaningful for buyers who value supporting Philippine industry.

04 Web Developer

"Strengthen the foundation."

The site works — a few under-the-hood improvements will make it faster, safer, and easier for Google to recommend.

- Confirm the secure padlock (HTTPS) is active site-wide. Buyers (and Google) trust sites that visibly show a secure connection.
- Use a branded email address. unimaxsteel@gmail.com works, but inquiries@unimaxsteel.com instantly looks more established and is easy to set up.
- Add page titles and short descriptions to every page. These are the small lines of text that show up on Google — often the first impression a buyer has of you.
- Optimise images for fast loading. Larger product photos can be compressed without losing visible quality, making the site feel snappier — especially on mobile data.
- Run a quick mobile check on real phones to confirm everything (forms, buttons, menu) works smoothly on iPhone and Android.
- Add Google Analytics so we can see which products get the most interest and which pages convert best.
- Embed a Google Map on the Contact page for each location — buyers planning a site visit will appreciate it.

05 Digital Marketing Expert

"Turn visitors into inquiries."

You're getting traffic from people searching "roofing supplier Philippines," "steel decking," and similar terms. The site can do more to convert that interest into phone calls and emails.

- Add social proof. The single biggest lift available, in order of impact:
  - Project showcases — 3–5 named projects with photos and a short story ("15,000 sqm warehouse roof, completed in 12 weeks").
  - Client logos — contractors and developers you've supplied.
  - Testimonials — even two or three short quotes carry huge weight in B2B.
- Add trust markers. Certifications, association memberships, and warranty terms — display them clearly on the homepage and product pages.
- Capture leads more actively. Beyond the brochure download, add a "Request a Quote" form with a few simple fields (name, project type, location, quantity estimate).
- Display office hours and a response-time commitment ("We reply to all inquiries within 1 business day"). Small promise, big confidence boost.
- Activate the social channels. A steady rhythm of project photos and short build videos will compound over time and drive return visits.
- Consider a simple blog or "Resources" section. Articles like "How to Choose Between Hi-Rib and Corrugated Roofing" attract buyers early in their research and rank well on Google.

06 — RECOMMENDED ROADMAP

A phased, low-risk path forward

We suggest tackling improvements in this order so you see results quickly without disrupting the site.

PHASE 1 · THIS MONTH

Quick Wins

1. Fix the small typos across the site.
2. Switch to a branded email address (inquiries@unimaxsteel.com).
3. Add a strong headline and a single primary call-to-action on the homepage.
4. Embed Google Maps on the Contact page.
5. Add office hours and a response-time commitment.

PHASE 2 · 1 TO 3 MONTHS

Strategic Upgrades

1. Professional photo shoot — products and finished projects.
2. Rewrite product pages with benefits and a short FAQ each.
3. Add a "Featured Projects" section with 3–5 case studies.
4. Add a "Request a Quote" form, connected to your inbox.
5. Display certifications and warranty information.

PHASE 3 · 3 TO 6 MONTHS

Growth Investments

1. Refresh the brochure to match the upgraded site.
2. Launch a simple Resources / blog section (1–2 articles per month).
3. Build a steady social media content rhythm.
4. Set up Google Analytics + a basic monthly performance review.

A closing note

Unimax Steel has the product range, the geographic reach, and the operational story to be a leading name in Philippine steel. The website is already doing real work for the business — these recommendations are about helping it work harder, so every visitor is one step closer to becoming a customer.

We'd suggest starting with the Quick Wins so you see momentum within weeks, then planning the Strategic Upgrades as a focused 60–90 day project.

Happy to walk you through any section in detail, or scope a phased engagement around the priorities that matter most.
